CEDT-RPS-Vol.0036

THE PIOUS PREDATOR: THE ANATOMY AND LIFE CYCLE OF PATRIARCHAL NARCISSISM

BY

~ ~ CYPRIAN F. EDWARD-EKPO, LL.D ~ ~

Director-General, Institute of Law Research & Development of United Nations (ILAWDUN), Washington D.C, USA; Director & Board member, Universal School of Eclectic Analysis, Legal Research & Law Studies (UNISERL), Suffolk, United Kingdom; PHU's Distinguished Professor of International Environmental Law, Newark, Delaware, USA; & SIA's Professor of Public International Law (h. c), London, UK; Chief Executive Officer & Dean of Research, Multi-Intelligence Development LLC (Legal Consultants & Administrators); Registrar, International Institute for Humanitarian & Environmental Law; and Director, International Affairs & UN Ambassadorial Representative for International Peace Commission (IPC), Dallas, TX, USA.

[SEPTEMBER 02, 2026]

ABSTRACT

This lecture dissects the complex mechanics of Patriarchal Narcissistic Personality Disorder (PNPD) in male abusers. It explores the lifelong evolution of the male narcissist, beginning with the genetic roots and toxic maternal enmeshment that engineer his personality. It exposes the hidden mechanics of an "invisible cage," detailing how perpetrators weaponize religious codes, dogmatic moral structures, maternity traps, and societal customs to enforce absolute control. Finally, this writing maps the insidious "graduation of abuse"—the strategic shift from subtle manipulation to overt, coercive captivity designed to erase a partner's identity systematically.

INTRODUCTION

Let us speak once again about the destructive nature of narcissism. To return to this critical subject, this particular lecture focuses specifically on the "male narcissist" within the framework of Patriarchal Narcissistic Personality Disorder (PNPD).

Before we dissect the harrowing, real-life story of a woman currently suffocating under the toxicity of patriarchal narcissism, we must first understand the psychological anatomy and behavioral tendencies of a male narcissist.

Primary Blueprint of a Male Narcissist

The psychological blueprint of a male narcissist frequently develops from a highly specific maternal dynamic. Male narcissists often have toxic, overbearing mothers who have seized absolute control over their households—dominating their husbands or managing singlehood through complete mental, psychological, and spiritual manipulation. Driven by an unconscious, deep-seated phobia that karma will eventually catch up with their sons, these mothers systematically engineer their sons' psychology. They raise them to adopt a character of absolute patriarchy as a defensive shield. As these sons grow into adulthood, they deploy two distinct mechanisms of narcissistic control to subjugate their romantic partners (wife or fiancée):

Two Distinct Control Mechanisms of Patriarchal Narcissism

1. The Coercive Control Mechanism:
This is the overt, forceful enforcement of authority. The narcissist uses raw psychopathic influence— instilling constant fear, physical or emotional abuse or brutality, harshness, and direct abuse— to break a woman's will and force absolute compliance with his own perspective and personality.

2. The Subtle Control Mechanism:
This is a quiet, insidious form of imprisonment masquerading as righteousness. The narcissist relies on a relentless stream of religious dogmas, cultural traditions, and societal marriage mantras, making the woman see him as her perfect model and mentor. By weaponizing moral codes, he uses emotional blackmail to slowly reshape a woman's mind into his own preferred, submissive image. Inherently, male narcissists possess deeply dogmatic minds, and they are mostly very religious people. Know that, "of all bad men, religious bad men are the worst."

Key Distinction between Coercive and Subtle Control Mechanisms:
The terrifying difference between the two tracks – coercive and subtle control mechanisms – lies in your perception. While coercive control eventually forces you to realize you are acting out of fear and making survival compromises just to keep the peace and sustain the marriage or relationship, subtle control tricks you into viewing your abuser as an ideal, moral man of high ethics. In fact, some of those men appear as men who neither drink or smoke, or barely do so, and parade themselves as men of high religious moral standards.

Both coercive and subtle control mechanisms, bit by bit, force you to fall in line until your true self is completely erased, and eventually, nothing of you is left.

Through these dual tactics, they slowly decimate your core identity, fusing your existence entirely into theirs until nothing of your original self remains. This systematic erasure targets everything: your spirituality, personal growth, career growth, identity, friendships, and family philosophies. To ensure absolute compliance, they purposefully isolate you, systematically cutting ties with your family and lifelong friends. Their sole motive is to force you to feed their fragile, insatiable ego—positioning themselves as a master with absolute authority over your life while you are reduced to a mere subject. This total domination is the ultimate goal of every narcissist.

The Benchmark: Religious Dogma as a Weapon of Patriarchal Narcissism:

At its core, patriarchal narcissism operates on a singular benchmark: women are inherently inferior to men in the grand design of nature. To sustain this delusion and feed their fragile egos, male narcissists heavily rely on dogmatic, distorted religious mantras. They adhere to fabricated spiritual laws and enforce those fabricated spiritual "laws" that have no basis in the actual universe—assertions like :

- "a wife must blindly join whatever church or religion her husband dictates,"

- "a woman must never wear trousers,"

- "women have no place in politics,"

-"Women education ends in the kitchen, "

- "A woman must never speak without her husband's explicit permission."

Because marriage is sacred, you have to be extremely submissive and permanently stay in the house with someone who abuses you, even if he may kill you. It is God's command to stay."

"A good woman cannot call the police for her husband, even when he abuses and threatens her life; she, as a survivor, can only pray for an abuser to change, and she is not even permitted to inform her family because she has been married out."

" The devil always fights marriages. You have to endure the abuse and keep praying for a change of heart of the abuser. His actions are the devil's handiwork. Stay married."

"God hates divorce.
"Marriage is sacred, and divorce must not be considered for what. Therefore, what God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

All these are echoed in a patriarchal society while offering no protection, accountability, intervention, shelter, advocacy, or compassion.

In reality, the cosmos recognizes no such spiritual laws. They are entirely artificial – human mind constructs invented by male narcissists to keep women trapped beneath a rights-based baseline of human dignity.

For example, such a mantra of "what God hath joined together..." is a completely distorted interpretation of the scripture if it means you must remain in an abusive relationship.

God did not join you. It's you who made your choice of a partner. God does not intervene in the choices of souls' personalities. Everyone has the right of privilege. Will to make choices in life and receive the recompense. This also includes the right to amend their errors.

Highly religious spaces are the preferred breeding grounds for these predators. That is why male narcissists are almost always overtly religious, deliberately steering their families toward extreme, fanatical mindsets. They do this because religiosity is the easiest path to unquestionable control. Because people naturally attribute religious authority to God, the narcissist can hide behind scripture to insulate his abuse from criticism.

This is not a new phenomenon; it is an ancient playbook. It was upon this exact patriarchal framework that the ancient Romans decreed women could not own property. If a woman inherited wealth from her father, it was automatically forfeited to an extended male relative or transferred entirely to her husband without her consent.

To them, a woman's intellect was denied, and her entire human existence was reduced to two stations: childbearing and kitchen cookery. While modern civilizations have legally abolished these arbitrary inequalities, the spirit of this ancient abuse is still practiced individually today within highly patriarchal customs and communities.

Maternity Traps as the Lifecycle Graduation from Subtle to Coercive Control Level: The male narcissist is deeply addicted to the high of mental and environmental imprisonment. He does not want a partner; he wants a captive. This psychological addiction is precisely why he is usually desperate for his partner to get pregnant and give birth as quickly as possible.
To his calculating mind, children are not just family—they are a lifetime insurance policy against his captive escape.

Once the trap is sprung—usually after the woman has given birth to two or more children—the narcissist changes gears. Believing that the psychological, financial, and societal weight of raising multiple children or shame of getting married to another man, or difficulty in getting another man that will be interested in her after giving birth to children of first husband or previous fiancé, will prevent her from ever seeking a divorce, he sheds his mask.

It is at this point that the Subtle Control Mechanism is discarded, and he graduates into full-blown, terrifying Coercive Control.

This calculated timeline explains a chilling family dynamic: narcissistic mothers are often aggressively eager for their son's fiancée or wife to get pregnant immediately, triggering severe domestic friction if there is any delay.

This pressure does not stem from a genuine desire for family growth. It is a cold, calculated strategy to ensure that a virtuous, high-value woman is perpetually trapped before she realizes who she actually married.

The Common Prey and Victim of a Male Narcissist: A Story of Captivity.

The male narcissist does not hunt in the wild; he targets specific prey. He hunts for virtuous, submissive women—women raised on traditional values, who prefer peace over chaos, and who naturally seek connection rather than conflict.

A male narcissist cannot stand a female narcissist because predators cannot control other predators. They need a gentle soul to feed upon.

To understand this dynamic in real life, consider a 43-year-old lady I counseled just last two months, who was drowning in severe clinical anxiety and marital confusion. She was raised in a highly secure, strict military environment as the daughter of an Army Colonel. Her upbringing combined rigid discipline with a deeply spiritual, almost esoteric background.

Sheltered from the world, her very first exposure to life outside her family bubble was college. There, she fell deeply in love with a young man—a relationship that became her first, only, and ultimate romantic attachment.

Though her mother possessed the spiritual sight to oppose the union, the young woman was blinded by a boundless, consuming flesh-love. Because of this intense attachment, her husband became the center of her universe. Her devotion was so complete that if she ever had to choose between her own spiritual convictions, or God of her heart and her husband, she chose him – the husband. If she had to choose between her birth family and him, she chose him. To her, he was the definition of a perfect, intelligent, moral, and upright man.

But the stark reality was far darker. There was nothing outstanding or perfect about this man. He was simply hiding behind a thick shield of dogmatic religiosity and self-righteousness, which his wife confused for high moral standing and intelligence, without knowing it is a subtle control mechanism of a narcissist. She was living in a state of profound mental slavery, breathing a heavily polluted, narcissistic atmosphere.

Decades passed before she finally woke up. At 43 years old, with four children, she suddenly realized that her identity, her life's potential, and her self-worth had been completely decimated.

The trap was fully sprung, and her husband had finally graduated from subtle religious manipulation into overt, terrifying coercive abuse. Trapped in this inescapable cage, she reached a point where life felt suicidal. My immediate, urgent mission was to pull her back from the edge and educate her against taking her own life.

The Motive and the Matrix – Nature vs. Nurture:

What drives a human being to become this destructive?

At its core, narcissism thrives on four pillars, namely:

1. Grandiosity: Grandiosity is a lack of empathy and an insatiable need for validation.

2. Manipulative Control: This is actually the primary goal as well as inherent display of narcissists. He views control not as a choice but as a survival mechanism to protect his fragile ego. He micro-manages your reality, isolating you and shifting goalposts so you remain perpetually off-balance and dependent on his approval.

3. Insecurities with BDP: Driven by deep-seated inferiority or self-doubt, a male narcissist projects an illusion of superiority to dominate his partner and mask his vulnerability. He isolates and devalues her to feed his own ego, desperately maintaining control to keep his hidden self-doubt from resurfacing.

4. NPD Transmission and Viability: Psychologists and neuroscientists have long debated whether this dark trait is born or made.

Modern genetic research shows that narcissistic personality disorder (NPD) has a heavy hereditary component, frequently clustering in families alongside borderline and antisocial personality disorders.

While there is no single "narcissism gene," a child can inherit highly heritable baseline traits like emotional dysregulation, high impulsivity, and a volatile temperament from his parents or grandparents Neuroimaging even reveals structural differences in the brains of narcissists, specifically in regions that process empathy and emotional rewards.
However, genetic markers only create the gunpowder; the environment pulls the trigger.

In patriarchal narcissism, a mother passes down the psychological vulnerability, but the actual monster is engineered through dysfunctional, toxic parenting during early childhood. This psychological transmission usually happens through two primary pathways, namely:

1. Parental Overvaluation

- The mother showers the son with inflated, conditional praise and attachment and let him become aware of the need to be brave against other people right-based consciousness, and encourages him to cultivate reduced-conscience about how other people feels , by practicing self- superiority and self-satisfaction.
- The boy learns his worth is tied entirely to being superior and dominant.
- The boy instills in himself a fragile, artificial ego and a profound sense of entitlement.
- The boy erases healthy boundaries, burying deep inner shame beneath a mask of superiority.

2. Emotional Exploitation

- The mother uses the son as a "surrogate partner" for emotional validation. The boy child is forced to suppress his own emotions to manage his mother's moods.
- Through either overvaluation or emotional enmeshment, the boy learns to view all human relationships as cold and transactional networks, except how he expects other people to regard him and validate him. He mimics his mother's lack of empathy. As an adult, he relies entirely on the systematic subjugation and admiration of his partner to keep his fragile ego from collapsing.

Absolute patriarchy is not an ordained order of nature; it is one of the ultimate foundational ministries of narcissism. It is a psychological disease disguised as divine order. A woman who makes a choice of living or marrying a male narcissist and stays in it is not only a danger to her soul. She is a disappointment to her heritage.

CONCLUSION

~ Prof. Cyprian Edward-Ekpo is a globally renowned legal scholar, author, public international law, and petroleum & environmental law specialist, and human rights advocate. He is widely recognized for his leadership roles in global and regional legal research institutions, as well as his outspoken public commentary on governance, constitutional law, and international relations. He can be reached via email: cyprian.edward@uniserl.education and cyprian.edward@ilawdun.us